Skin Delivery Systems

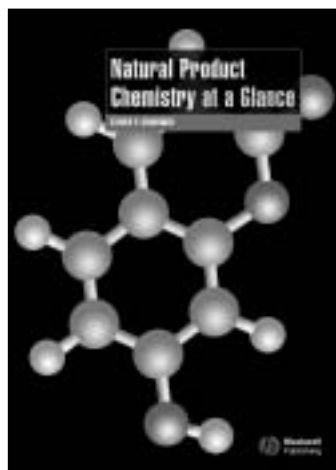

Transdermals, Dermatologicals, and Cosmetic Actives

JOHN WILLE

Biodern Technologies

- a practical reference focused on new techniques for delivering active agents through the skin;
- explains emerging methods such as iontophoresis and sonophoresis;
- presents new delivery systems, including graft copolymers capable of delivering hydrophilic and hydrophobic drugs;
- investigates microemulsions technologies;
- presents nanotechnological approaches to transdermal drug delivery;
- useful for pharmaceutical, as well as cosmetic company researchers.

READERSHIP: pharma-based specialists in transdermal drug delivery; research scientists and chemists in the cosmetics and skin-care industry; dermatologists with interest in transdermal drug delivery; medical device specialists (e.g., skin patch manufacturers)
