Contributions and correspondence

Three copies of all ARTICLES and COMMENTS should be sent to:

THE EDITORS
ECONOMIC HISTORY REVIEW
DEPT OF ECONOMIC HISTORY
LONDON SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE
HOUGHTON STREET
LONDON WC2A 2AE

ARTICLES should not be more than 8,000 words in length, including footnotes. If they embody the results of detailed original research, some space should preferably be devoted to the more general significance of the subject-matter. They should be original contributions and should not be submitted to other publications simultaneously. Copyright will be held by the Economic History Society.

COMMENTS should not be more than 1,500 words in length. They should normally, though not necessarily, be concerned with articles previously published in the Review. The author of a comment on a Review article should also send a copy to the author of the article. NOTES are subject to the same approximate limit of length.

It is essential that all intending contributors should first obtain from the editors a copy of the Review’s ‘Notes for contributors’ which list the main literary and typographical conventions followed.
