THE REVIEW OF POLICY RESEARCH

The Review of Policy Research is an international peer-reviewed journal devoted to the dissemination of research and insightful commentary on the outcomes and consequences of policy change in comparative and domestic contexts. We are particularly interested in manuscripts that examine the intersection of policy and administration in fields such as science, technology, computers and the Internet, globalization, environment, cultural politics, education, and gender issues. In addition to articles and symposia, the Review features brief critiques of current research by scholars and policy practitioners as well as reviews of books, films, and electronic and other media.
