

The Philosophical Quarterly

PRIZE ESSAY COMPETITION

2008

£1500

The Philosophical Quarterly invites submissions for its 2008 international prize essay competition, the topic of which is
'Creativity'

Essays are invited that consider any philosophical issue about creativity. Topics might include the definition of the concept; the value of creativity; the role that the study of creativity should play in philosophical subject areas, such as aesthetics, the philosophy of science or the philosophy of mind; and the philosophical implications that arise from consideration of empirical work on creativity by psychologists or other scientists. While it may be appropriate to consider the work of historical writers on creativity, essays should focus primarily on the philosophical issues concerning creativity.

The closing date for submissions is 1st November 2008
