EDITORIAL

Journal of Interventional Cardiology is widely regarded as a must-read for the interventional cardiologist determined to stay current in diagnosing, investigating, and managing patients with cardiovascular disease. JOIC publishes the most reliable and authoritative papers from the wealth of information that becomes available as new procedures and techniques develop. All material is peer-reviewed under the editorial direction of Cindy L. Grines, MD and a prominent international editorial board. Six bimonthly issues contain original research, clinical investigation reports, trial reviews, special guest-edited issues, and a core curriculum to help readers prepare for the subspecialty board examination in interventional cardiology.
