

‘Economic History Review’
COPYRIGHT ASSIGNMENT FORM

This Agreement is made with ‘The Economic History Society’. The Agreement is for the Article submitted by you (“Author”) for publication in the ‘Economic History Review’ published by Blackwell Publishing Ltd on behalf of The Economic History Society (“the Society”), and is referred to in this Agreement as “Article”, where Article is deemed to cover Original Articles, Editorials, Reviews, Book Reviews, Forum papers, Comments and Opinions.

To enable Blackwell Publishing to publish the Article in ‘Economic History Review’ (“the Journal”), the ownership of copyright must be established. Please read and complete the form below and return one copy to the address given below. You MUST complete section A; sections B, C or D need to be completed as appropriate. There are explanatory notes to this Agreement, which also form part of the Agreement.

The Article cannot be published until this signed Agreement is received by the Journal.

SECTION A: Author’s Warranty (Please PRINT your details)

Name:

Address:

Article title (or provisional Article title):

.....

Names of all authors in the order in which they appear in the Article:

.....

In consideration of the publication of the Article in the above Journal, I hereby warrant and undertake to The Economic History Society:

- a. that this Article is an original work, has not been published before and the Article, or a substantial part of it, is not being considered for publication elsewhere in its final form-either in printed or electronic form;
- b. that the Article has not been copied, wholly or substantially, from any other work or material;
- c. that I have obtained permission from the copyright holder to reproduce in the Article (in all media including print and electronic form) material not owned by me, and that I have acknowledged the source;
- d. that this Article contains no violation of any existing copyright or other third party right or any material of an obscene, indecent, libellous or otherwise unlawful nature and that to the best of my knowledge this Article does not infringe the rights of others;
- e. that I will indemnify and keep indemnified the Editor(s) of the Journal, The Economic History Society and Blackwell Publishing Ltd against all costs, liabilities, injuries, losses (which includes direct, indirect, consequential loss of profit), damages, claims, demands, proceedings, claims and expenses (including legal costs and expenses), which The Economic History Society incurs or suffers arising from any breach of this warranty and the other warranties on my behalf in this Agreement;
- f. that in the case of a multi-authored Article, all co-authors have assigned their copyright in the Article to me on the same terms as those set out in this Agreement.

Author: Signed: Date:

SECTION B: Copyright Assignment

In consideration of the publication of the Article in the Journal, I hereby assign with full title guarantee to The Economic History Society copyright in the Article for the full period of copyright and all renewals, extensions, revisions and revivals together with all accrued rights of action throughout the world in any form and in any language (including all media, both now known or later developed). Furthermore, I will execute such further documents, and take such actions and do such things, as may be reasonably requested by the Economic History Society to give full effect to the terms of this assignment including assisting the Economic History Society in the resolution of any question concerning the copyright in the Article, and to secure the full right, title and interest of the Economic History Society in the Article.

Notwithstanding the above, I retain all proprietary rights other than copyright, such as patent and trade mark rights and rights to any process or procedure described in the Article.

Author: Signed: Date:

SECTION C: If copyright in the Article is owned by someone other than the Author

I hereby grant the Economic History Society non-exclusive rights to reproduce and/or distribute this Article (in full or in part) and to publish the same throughout the world in any format and in all languages including without limitation in printed, electronic or other medium on optical disk, transmission over the internet and other communication networks and in any other electronic form, and to authorise others (including reproduction rights organisations such as the Copyright Licensing Agency and the Copyright Clearance Center) to do the same. The Economic History Society may assign its rights under this Agreement.

Title of copyright holder:

This will be printed on the copyright line on each page of the Article. It is the Author's responsibility to provide the correct information of the copyright holder.

Signed on behalf of copyright holder: Date:

Title/position/address:

In signing this form, the signee asserts that the manuscript submitted has been approved by all authors in the form in which it has been submitted, and that the warranties given above have been read and agreed by all authors.

SECTION D: If you are a US Federal Government employee

I hereby warrant that I am an employee of the US Federal Government, and that the Article has been written within this capacity.

Author: Signed: Date:

US law states that all work created by US Federal Government employees is in the public domain. The Economic History Society therefore makes no claim to original US Government works

Full details regarding the assignment of copyright, the management of permissions, and what rights are granted back to the authors are included in the accompanying "Notes on The Assignment of Copyright", which form part of this Agreement.

NOTES ON THE ASSIGNMENT OF COPYRIGHT

Why do we ask for copyright to be assigned?

- 1 The policy of The Economic History Society is for The Economic History Society to acquire copyright for all Articles. The reasons for this are:
 - (a) ownership of copyright by one central organisation facilitates international protection against infringement, libel or plagiarism;
 - (b) it enables the most efficient processing of permissions and licensing in order that the Article can be made available to the fullest extent both directly and through intermediaries, and in both print and electronic form;
 - (c) it enables The Economic History Society and the Publisher of the Journal, Blackwell Publishing, to maintain the integrity of an Article once refereed and accepted for publication, by facilitating centralised management of all media forms including linking, reference validation and distribution.

What rights does the author retain?

- 2 The author retains his or her rights in the Article including the right to be identified as the author whenever and wherever the Article is published, under the terms of the UK Copyright Designs and Patents Act 1988. We will make sure that your name and the name(s) of your co-author(s) is/are always clearly associated with the Article and, while you do allow us to make necessary editorial changes, we will not make any substantial alteration to the Article without consulting you. When the Article is accepted, we undertake to publish it as soon as we reasonably can. If it is rejected, this Agreement is automatically cancelled and all the rights come back to you.

- 3 In addition to the rights stated above the author shall retain the following rights:
 - (a) The right, after publication by The Economic History Society, to use all or part of the Article and abstract, without revision or modification, in personal compilations or other publications of the author's own works, and to make copies of all or part of such materials for the author's use for lecture or classroom purposes (excluding the preparation of course pack material for onward sale by libraries and institutions), provided that the first page of such use or copy prominently displays the bibliographic data and the following copyright notice: '© [year] The Economic History Society'.
 - (b) Prior to publication, the author may share with colleagues print or electronic 'preprints' of the unpublished Article, in form and content as accepted by The Economic History Society for publication in the Journal. Such preprints may be posted as electronic files on the author's own website for personal or professional use, or on the author's internal university, college or corporate networks/intranet, or secure external website at the author's institution, but not for commercial sale or for any systematic external distribution by a third party (e.g. a listserve or database connected to a public access server). Prior to publication, the author must include the following notice on the preprint. 'This is a preprint of an Article accepted for publication in The Economic History Review © [year] Economic History Society.
 - (c) After publication of the Article by the Economic History Society, the preprint notice shall be amended to read as follows: 'This is an electronic version of an Article published in [include the complete citation information for the final version of the Article as published in the print edition of the Journal]'. The author agrees not to update the preprint or replace it with the published version of the Article without first seeking permission from Blackwell Publishing as agent of The Economic History Society. The preprint can be replaced with the published version of the Article. Posting of the published Article on any other electronic public server can only be done with written permission from Blackwell Publishing.

- 4 In assigning copyright you are not forfeiting your rights to use the Article elsewhere. This you may do provided that the Journal is acknowledged as the original source.

Permissions

- 5 All requests to reuse the Article, in whole or in part, in another publication (including in all commercially published edited volumes) will be handled by Blackwell Publishing, and any permission fees will be retained by The Economic History Society. The author will receive 50% of all fees paid where permission is granted to any third party to re-typeset and reprint material in commercially published edited volumes in instances where the author's share of the fee exceeds £40. In these cases the author's consent will be sought, which is assumed to have been given if we have not heard from him/her within thirty days of writing to the last known address. In the case of co-authorship, the first-named author will be contacted for consent, and fees for subsequent redistribution amongst their co-authors will be sent to them.

- 6 In addition to reproduction in conventional printed form the Article and the accompanying abstract may be stored electronically and then delivered electronically or in printed form to meet individual requests thus increasing exposure of the Article to the international community. This transfer includes the right to adapt the presentation of the Article for use in conjunction with computer systems and programs, including reproduction or publication in machine-readable form and incorporation in retrieval systems.

- 7 Should the copyright be held by someone other than the author, e.g. the author's employer, Blackwell Publishing, on behalf of The Economic History Society, require non-exclusive permission to administer requests from third parties. Such requests will be handled in accordance with Note 6 above, and all correspondence will be conducted with the author, who is presumed to be authorised by the copyright owner to deal with such questions on the owner's behalf.

- 8 The Journal is registered with the Copyright Licensing Agency (London) and the Copyright Clearance Center (New York), and other Reproductive Rights Organisations. These non-profit making organisations offer centralised licensing arrangements for photocopying.

Government employees

- 9 If you are or were a UK Crown servant and the Article is made in that capacity, the Article must be submitted for clearance by the Permanent Head of the Department concerned. If the Article is determined to be copyrightable at a later date, then copyright and all rights included in this will be transferred to The Economic History Society.

Where an Article is Crown copyright, Blackwell Publishing must be informed as soon as it is accepted for publication so that the appropriate arrangements can be made with HMSO.

Applicable Law

- 10 The law governing this Agreement is the law of England and Wales. Any dispute concerning this Agreement shall be subject to the non-exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of England and Wales.
