Notes on the Assignment of Copyright

- 1 The journal's policy is to acquire copyright for all contributions. There are two reasons for this:
 - (a) ownership of copyright by one central organisation tends to ensure maximum international protection against infringement;
 - (b) it also ensures that requests by third parties to reprint a contribution, or part of it, are handled efficiently and in accordance with a general policy which is sensitive both to any relevant changes in international copyright legislation and to the general desirability of encouraging the dissemination of knowledge.
- 2 The author retain his or her moral rights in the article, including the right to be identified as the author whenever and wherever the article is published, under the terms of the Australian Copyright Act, 1968.
- 3 In assigning your copyright you are not forfeiting your rights to use your contribution elsewhere. This you may do after obtaining written permission from Blackwell Publishing Asia Pty Ltd (only withheld in exceptional circumstances) provided that the journal is acknowledged as the original source.
- 4 The journal is registered with the Copyright Agency Ltd (Sydney) and the Copyright Clearance Center (New York), non-profit making organizations which offer centralized licensing arrangements for photocopying. Any income received through these arrangements will be used to further the interests of the journal.
- 5 It is understood that in some cases copyright will be held by the contributor's employer (for instance the Government). If so, the journal requires non-exclusive permission to deal with requests from third parties.
- 6 In addition to reproduction in conventional printed form, your article may be stored electronically (e.g. for inclusion in a document delivery service or an online version of the journal). Your assignment of copyright signifies your agreement to the journal making arrangements to include your paper in such document delivery services and electronic journal databases.
- 7 By signing this form you certify that your contribution is your original work, has not been published before and is not being considered for publication elsewhere; that you have obtained permission for and acknowledged the source of any excerpts from other copyright works; that to the best of your knowledge your paper contains no statements which are libellous, unlawful or in any way actionable and that you have informed any co-authors of the terms of this agreement and are signing on their behalf.
