INNOVATION IN THE HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES BLACKWELL COMPASS JOURNALS

Each Compass journal provides authoritative overviews of the most important and interesting research in the discipline. All articles are specially commissioned by the Compass editors, with the advice of the international editorial board. All articles are peer-reviewed. Fast, continuous publication ensures that readers receive the most up-to-date information. Faculty, advanced students, and researchers will all benefit from the accessible style of Compass articles, which are designed for the non-specialist, yet reflect the current thinking in the field. The broad scope of each title enables readers to escape traditional boundaries and browse or search across the entire discipline, and make interesting connections between sub-disciplines. Each article also includes a reference-linked bibliography, making it the idea entry point into the specialist literature.

Literature Compass provides an admirable array of articles, from useful overviews to contentious interventions, in an easy-to-access format. In my own field of the contemporary, Literature Compass has a world-wide reach, treating Anglophone writing from around the globe in addition to twentieth-century British literature.' Professor Suzanne Keen, College of William and Mary
