

Figures and Tables

Figure 3.1	Monotonic convergence in a simple linear model	31
Figure 3.2	The qualitative properties of nonlinear systems	36
Figure 5.1	The top ten occupations of employed women in the USA, 1997	64
Figure 9.1	“The Directors”	145
Figure 10.1	Industrial districts in Italy	155
Figure 13.1	Long waves of economic activity	207
Figure 13.2	The product cycle	207
Figure 13.3	The logistic diffusion curve	209
Figure 14.1	An upward demand shift	232
Figure 14.2	A supply shift to the right	233
Figure 29.1	Internet hosts per 100,000 persons, January 1998	494
Figure 30.1	The problematic of international political economy	500
Table 5.1	Labor force participation rates by gender and race, 1950–1995	66
Table 6.1	Alternative approaches to institutional analysis and their application in economic geography	83
Table 9.1	Ideal-typical forms of work organization in Fordist and after-Fordist labor markets	139
Table 10.1	The regional distribution and sectoral specialization of localities (communes) with industrial districts in Italy	156
Table 10.2	Typology of industrial districts with respect to innovative capability	160
Table 14.1	World proven crude oil reserves by region, 1975, 1985, and 1995	229
Table 14.2	World crude oil production, refining, and consumption by region, 1995	230
Table 22.1	Roles of the qualitative state in a modern economy	364
Table 22.2	Four types of capitalism	366
Table 22.3	Welfare structures and workfare strategies	370
Table 25.1	Trade eras	413

Table 25.2	Composition of world trade, 1965–96	414
Table 25.3	Growth in trade	416
Table 25.4	Openness ratios, 1965, 1980, and 1997	417
Table 25.5	Pervasiveness of different types of NTBs	418
Table 25.6	A partial ranking of corruption around the world, 1998	420
Table 26.1	Geographies of money and finance	433